Who Needs a World View?

Raymond Geuss

“Geuss has undertaken in recent years to resuscitate the genre of the classical philosophical essay, and he has by now made himself an absolute master of it. This is abundantly evident in his new collection of essays, which takes us on a vertiginous and often exhilarating journey that easily passes from Homer to the present in pursuit of his leading question, ‘Who needs a world view?’”

The Logical Alien
Conant and His Critics
Edited by Sofia Miguens

“An exceptionally interesting and original work—one that is not so much an outstanding contribution to some ‘field’ within philosophy as a work capable of reshaping what one takes philosophy to be.”
—Cora Diamond, author of Reading Wittgenstein with Anscombe, Going On to Ethics

“These pages are filled with nuances in conceptual clarification, a wealth of philosophical distinctions, and a level of rigor in philosophical reflection that is rarely found on our philosophical planet. This book will hold a singular place in the contemporary philosophical landscape.”
—Andrea Kern, author of Sources of Knowledge

Theory of the Gimmick
Aesthetic Judgment and Capitalist Form
Sianne Ngai

“A masterpiece...It is a major advance in aesthetic theory, and Marxist theory in particular, one that could help us all get over our Frankfurt melancholy and down to the garrulous work of actually naming the dynamics that produce art and artistic judgment under capitalism.”
—Christopher Nealon, author of The Matter of Capital

Automation and Utopia
Human Flourishing in a World without Work
John Danaher

“This is philosophy of technology at its best! Exquisitely clear, unflinchingly fair, and refreshingly original, Automation and Utopia is especially timely and important.”
—Evan Selinger, Rochester Institute of Technology

“At the precision of analytical philosophy and accessible, confident prose, Automation and Utopia demonstrates yet again why Danaher is one of our most important pathfinders to a flourishing future.”
—James Hughes, Institute for Ethics and Emerging Technologies

A Spirit of Trust
A Reading of Hegel’s Phenomenology
Robert B. Brandom

“Aspires to do for Hegel’s The Phenomenology of Spirit what Strawson’s The Bounds of Sense did for Kant’s The Critique of Pure Reason: to transpose a seminal work of German Idealism into the terminological idiom and argumentative key of anglophone analytic philosophy—not only to render a past classic newly available to the present, but to transform the philosophical present through such a re-inheritance of its past.”

On the Shoulders of Giants
Umberto Eco
TRANSLATED BY Alastair McEwen
“Like a collection of TED talks on philosophy and literary history, these 12 dazzling texts explore grand themes of intellectual curiosity such as beauty, secrecy, the invisible, and the sacred.”
—Kirkus Reviews (starred review)
“Delightful...Eco’s remarks on such broad topics as ‘Beauty’ and ‘Ugliness,’ ‘Some Revelations on Secrecy,’ and ‘Representations of the Sacred’ reveal his astonishingly wide range of interests.”

On Not Being Someone Else
Tales of Our Unled Lives
Andrew H. Miller
“Miller is charming company, both humanly and intellectually. He is onto something: the theme of unled lives, and the fascinating idea that fiction intensifies the sense of provisionality that attends all lives. An extremely attractive book.”
—James Wood
“Reminds us just how alluring and confounding our singularity is and how, through literature, we make sense of being ourselves. To be someone—to be anyone—is about being someone and not being someone else. Miller’s amused and inspired book is utterly compelling about this, and about so much else.”

Home in America
On Loss and Retrieval
Thomas Dumm
“Thomas Dumm has endowed new intellectual life in the politics of location. This is a wise, sensitive, poetic, and relentlessly thoughtful inquiry into the meanings of being at home today. Among other things, it offers a convincing and elaborate answer to Adorno’s old assertion that the highest form of morality involves systematic estrangement from the possibility of feeling at home in your own home.”

Smellosophy
What the Nose Tells the Mind
A. S. Barwich
“This is the book on perception we have been waiting for: a scientifically-informed and philosophically astute treatment of our elusive sense of smell. A. S. Barwich skillfully guides us through the history of its study, recent discoveries, and philosophical theorizing about smell, and, in doing so, makes a significant contribution to all three.”

“Fascinating and instructive...King’s philosophy, speaking to us through the written word, may turn out to constitute his most enduring legacy.”

—New York Review of Books

“A compelling work of philosophy, all the more so because it treats King seriously without inoculating him from the kind of critique important to both his theory and practice.”

—Shivani Radhakrishnan, Los Angeles Review of Books

“Firmly situates Dr. King in the canon of American political thought...This is a must-read in our time.”

Rethinking Punishment and Responsibility
Erin I. Kelly
“Gives us a philosopher’s take on the concept of criminal ‘guilt,’ on how easily we miss the larger social context in which crime takes place, and how we need to broaden our blame in order to adjust our justice.”
—New Yorker
“This book has an elegant humanity that is missing in many discussions of punishment…The Limits of Blame is a model for philosophers who aim to engage with the criminal justice system.”
